

Meet Move Together!

Move Together is a fictional small grassroots initiative that uses basketball to empower girls from low-income and migrant backgrounds. Through regular basketball sessions, Move Together aims to create an inclusive and supportive environment where girls can be active, connect with others, build confidence and strengthen their independence and self-esteem.

Move Together was founded by Hannah, Alia and Tom – three friends who share the belief that sport can be about much more than physical activity. Together, they want to create an environment in which girls feel welcome, supported and able to develop both on and off the basketball court.

started playing basketball through a free community programme. Basketball quickly became more than just a sport for her: it gave her a supportive environment, a sense of belonging and opportunities to grow personally. Later, she started volunteering as a basketball coach and at the local youth centre.

ALIA

moved to the city as a child and knows what it feels like to arrive somewhere new and struggle to feel part of a community. Today, she works as a youth worker at the local youth centre, where she supports young people from a range of backgrounds.

TOM

has been playing basketball for as long as he can remember. He also has been coaching youth basketball for years. Through coaching, he has seen that sport can influence much more than sporting ability – it can build confidence, relationships and a sense of belonging.

Throughout the Masterclasses on “The Road to Success”, “Built on Solid Foundations” and “Community Collaboration”, we follow Move Together as they develop their idea, build their organisation and work towards creating sustainable social impact through sport.
